

DESOLATION AND HUNGER IN WAKE OF ARMIES

The bread line in Malines. A portion of the great crowd of the inhabitants and those who fled into the town seeking safety, waiting in line before the Commissary of Police, where each is given a loaf of bread.

Inhabitants of Senlis Returning After Its Evacuation by the Germans. Senlis, which is near Paris, was the last town destroyed by the Germans in their march on the French capital.

Ruins of Fine Old Houses in Senlis Destroyed by the Bombardment. In the bombardment, the Mayor and a score of inhabitants were killed. The old cathedral was among the buildings laid in ruins. Photos Copyrighted by Underwood and Underwood.